

Ahmedabad: 'Witchdoctor' makes woman's Rs 50,000 vanish

AHMEDABAD: A 50-year-old woman from the Sardarmagar area of the city has been duped of Rs 50,000 by an alleged YouTube 'witchdoctor' on the pretext of bringing positive vibes in her house.

The accused after she got impressed by the videos posted by the accused on YouTube. But, she ended up losing money.

The victim, Kamla Shekhawat's son Dashrath Shekhawat, a resident of Bhadrashwar Society in Kotapur, filed a complaint with the Airport police station against the alleged 'witchdoctor' identified as Abhishek Mishra. Dashrath,

He said in his complaint that her mother Kamla was fed up with domestic disputes and wanted peace at home.

"For around a year, she watched various religious videos daily programs of godman and alleged 'witchdoctors' on various YouTube channels," Dashrath mentioned in the FIR. He said that she contacted one of such alleged 'witchdoctor' on a number given on the screen of the YouTube video and sought help. Kamla told Dashrath to deposit Rs 50,000 in an account of one Abhishek Mishra on June 26, 2021.

"As one of my neighbour's name was also Abhishek Mishra, I thought my mother might be lending money to him. And hence I deposited the amount in the account of Abhishek Mishra," said Dashrath. Dashrath said he asked his mother on why she gave money to Mishra. She told him that she had given the money to a 'witchdoctor'. Dashrath realized that she might have been cheated. He tried to contact on the phone number on which Kamla had earlier talked, but his calls went unanswered. He then filed a complaint.

Omicron test lure: Bank accounts emptied in Gujarat

AHMEDABAD: If you respond to an email promising a free Omicron test, you may let cybercrooks infect your device and empty your bank account.

A senior police officer said that cybercrooks send emails with attached malicious links and files. If people open such a link or a file, their system — cellphone or computer — is compromised and criminals gain access to vital information.

Recently, the cyber cell of the state police issued an advisory on cybercrooks using the Omicron test lure.

In some instances, when someone hoping to get a free test clicks a link, bank account information is sought innocuously. Those gullible enough to divulge private information find their accounts emptied, according to the advisory issued by the cyber cell on December 30.

In many cases, people ended up sharing their details with fraudsters and lost their money in this time of crisis, said a police officer. The officer said that a formal complaint is yet to be filed in relation to such cheating cases.

In most cases, people receive an email which is ostensibly from the National Health Service (NHS) of the UK," the officer said. "The message offers the Omicron test." The email senders also install fear by saying that if the test is not taken, the recipient will be placed in isolation to prevent the spread of the infection, said the officer.

Address update scam in Ahmedabad: Denim trousers cost Rs 94,000

AHMEDABAD: A pair of branded denim trousers cost a Vastrapur interior designer Rs 94,000, with cybercrooks siphoning off her money with a malicious link. She had clicked the link to get delivery updates, mentioned an FIR filed with the Vastrapur police station on Saturday.

The victim is Apurva Munet, 25, a resident of Sarvudai Apartments, who hails from Madhya Pradesh. She has been working as a senior interior designer with a private firm in Thaltej for the past two years.

She stated in her FIR that she had ordered one pair of denim trousers on November 28 and another on November 29 from a shopping portal of a leading denim Munet said in her FIR that the pair she had ordered on November 28 was delivered on December 3. But there was no sign of the November 29 order. On December 14, she searched for the customer care number of the delivery firm concerned. She called the number and a person asked her for the tracking ID and confirmed that her package was with the delivery firm.

She asked him if she could collect her package personally. But the man insisted that their courier would make the delivery. The man told her to update her address by paying Rs 3 using a link sent to her. Following his instruction, she paid the money after which she received a confirmation message. Later, the man called and asked for her preferred delivery time. On December 14, at around 8.30pm, she began receiving messages about money being deducted from her two bank accounts linked to a UPI payment app. In all, she ended up losing Rs 94,000. Having realized that she had been cheated, she approached Vastrapur police and filed a complaint. The Information Technology Act has been invoked as well.

IT professionals relaunch after long gaps

VADODARA: The 'work from home' system adopted by IT companies has brought out these women from long breaks that they took to take care of their families. They have reinvigorated their skills to match pace with the fast-paced technology sector. A group of women who are based in different states across the country, aged between 34 and 45 years, are now taking up IT jobs after a gap of several years including some who had returned after almost a decade. Kiran Issrani (45), who belongs to Vadodara and had started her career in the city, had to shift to Mumbai with her husband nine years ago. She had a 1.5-year-old son at that time and could not start working in Mumbai again. "We had no relatives in Mumbai and one of us had to take care of our son. I decided to do so and never returned to work till I came to know of a programme promising re-launch of careers of women like me," she said. The initiative was taken by a leading IT company having presence in the US and India.

Programme manager Diti Nagarsheth said that leaving jobs due to family was a major reason why the ratio of women on higher positions in IT companies reduced. "The sector is also very fast paced and breaks can lead to one feeling outdated," Nagarsheth told. The initiative selected 37 women and offered them extensive training. "My husband motivated me to start working again. I had passed masters in computer application (MCA) in 2009, but never worked as my placement coincided with my marriage. I could not have joined the training and hence had to let go of a good opportunity," said Priyanka Ajmera (34) from Bikaner. But now Ajmera is set to kick off her first job within a couple of days. "Work from home has really benefited people like us. It gave us a chance to start our careers again which may not be possible if we are supposed to go to offices," she said. "Having brushed my skills and got insight into various aspects of life apart from technical training.

Precautions first: More schools go online in Gujarat

AHMEDABAD: The rising Covid cases are now leaving many schools to opt for the online instruction once again. A majority of these schools are located on the western side of the Sabarmati river.

Over the last two days, few more schools announced that they would opt for online classes for their primary standards. HBK school in Memnagar announced online mode for classes 1 to 8, while Sattva Vikas for standards 1 to 12 and Sant Kabir announced the same for classes 1 to 6 recently. Archit Bhatt, a trustee of Tripada announced online mode for their primary section on Friday itself. Their offline attendance had dropped to just 20%. CN Vidyalaya has decided to switch to online education from Monday. Over the last few weeks, some 45 students has tested positive for Covid in the city while across the state, there are some 200 cases of children and teachers contracting the disease.

Cities like Surat had reported 90 cases of children and teachers contracting Covid in school.

To shoo or not to: Tricky for 108 staff when it's pride vs life

Rajkot: It's a strange dilemma when you are caught between lions and a person's life. Ask these 108 emergency services ambulance staffers carrying an injured person in an accident in Amreli on Sunday and being blocked by pride of Asiatic lions on the state highway. It was indeed an intense battle of wits between man vs wild as lions prohibits honking at the lions, while life, literally, was slipping away in front of their eyes. The incident took place on Saturday night when 40-year-old Prakash Boriya's bike rammed into a Nilgai near Vanda village of Savarkunda and he received serious head injury. He was being taken to Amreli Civil Hospital from Savarkunda to Amreli, when a pride of lions blocked the road of the ambulance which was speeding to save a life. The ambulance staff slowed down the vehicle, while they simultaneously started treating him inside the van to save precious time. Meanwhile, three lions came on the state highway and decided to stay walk in the middle of the road. Now, according to Wildlife Act, vehicles have to stop till the time the lions vacate the roads by themselves. This, then proved to be truly critical for the ambulance staff, who knew that every minute counted for the injured person. Emergency medical technician, Jagdish Solanki said, "The lions came on the road when we reached near Gokharvara hotel. They started walking on the road ahead of the vehicle for about a three kilometre stretch. We had no option but to slow down our pace till we turned towards Amreli city by crossing Shetrunji river. We had to respect pride and obey the rules too."

Mobile snatchers have free run in diamond city

Surat: It seems mobile snatchers in the city have shed their fear of provoking the law. Recently, four such incidents have been registered with different police stations in which citizens complained of being targeted by mobile phone snatchers.

The first such incident was registered with Limbayat police station by Nagjee Narola (53) an embroidery worker and a resident of Yogi Darshan society in Santhana who said bike-borne men snatched his mobile worth Rs 5,000. According to the complaint, Narola stated that he was going to his workstation near Anjana farm on a bike on December 19, when two unidentified persons on a bike suddenly snatched his mobile phone from his shirt pocket near Dumbhal water pumping station and fled. Limbayat police registered an offence against unidentified bikers and started an investigation. In another incident, Musa Saiyid (54) a resident of Sachin who works as a security guard in Varacha area stated that while he was returning home at around 10pm in November 3, two bike-borne men snatched his mobile phone worth Rs 2,500 from his shirt pocket and escaped from the spot near Golden point in Mahidharpara. He later filed a theft complaint with Mahidharpara police station. Samir Kadri (23), a daily wageer who lives in Atwalines was travelling on a two-wheeler along with his sister Kajal on December 28 at around 9:30pm. While passing near Bhestan bridge, two men on a bike snatched Kajal's mobile phone worth Rs 4,000 from her hand, he told the Pandesara police in his complaint.

Two sons of Popular Builders' promoter caught drunk

Palanpur: The controversial Ahmedabad-based firm Popular Builders is in the news yet again for wrong reasons. This time, two sons and a daughter-in-law of the promoter Raman Patel, were caught in a heavily inebriated condition at two separate places in Aravalli and Mehana on Saturday night, said police officers.

While Priyesh Patel and his wife Komal were arrested by Shamlaji police near Ansol Darshan society in Santhana Anavali, his younger brother Monang was caught drunk near Nandasan crossroads in Mehana along with three others. Monang Patel is accused of attempt to murder and harassment along with his father in a case filed by his wife in Vastrapur police in August 2020.

According to an FIR filed by Shamlaji police, the cops were deployed at a check post when they spotted a car being driven rashly. They stopped the car and found that a couple — Priyesh and Komal — inside. Both were stinking of liquor. The police team told Komal to undergo a breathalyzer test and insert the nozzle in her mouth and blow air in it. But she refused to undergo the test citing the Covid-19 pandemic. Her husband Priyesh too gave the same reason to evade the test.

Meanwhile, the cops called two punch witnesses who smelt their mouth and confirmed that they were drunk. "Their eyes were red due to inebriated condition and their speech was also slurred," the FIR states. Shamlaji police booked Priyesh for drunken driving and Komal for consuming liquor. On the other hand, Monang was caught heavily drunk with three others in a car near Nandasan crossroads by a police team of Mehana deployed there to check drunken driving cases.

According to an FIR filed with Mehana police, Monang was also unable to speak and failed a field sobriety test after which he was booked by police under prohibition charges. His two other friends named Vishwanath Raval from Vejalpur and Nikunj Patel from Ranip were also found drunk. The Popular Builders faced the first legal trouble in August last year after Monang's wife alleged sexual torture and attempt to murder against him and Raman Patel. Later, they were charged with around six cases of cheating and land grabbing by city police. Monang was released on bail from the Gujarat high court in January, but Raman is still behind bars.

Diamond baron to rebuild alma mater

BHAVNAGAR: He scripted a sparkling success story by building a diamond business that spans three countries. And, the 73-year-old businessman Dungarsi Goti is indebted to the lessons learnt in a government primary school that he studied in Vallabhipur village of Bhavnagar district. Sitting in swanky offices in the US, Hong Kong and Dubai, where his businesses are located, Goti frequently slips into nostalgia thinking about 'Kendravarti Shala' (earlier known as Taluka Shala), which helped him make a strong foundation for his hand, he told the Pandesara police in his complaint.

building get a fresh look. In fact, his children also studied in the same school. "My father studied here, I also got education in this school and so did my children. We have an emotional bonding as it was the only one in the village then," recalls Goti. Goti decided to help rebuild this school when he got to know that the structure was getting dilapidated and required urgent repairs. "I decided to rebuild it on my own. We will bear all the expenses and the current estimate suggests that Rs 1.25 crore will be required," he added. Once complete, this school will have 16 rooms, a dome, computer lab and all other modern facilities. The modern infrastructure will help students as most of them come from financially weak backgrounds. Goti aims to rebuild this into a grand school campus on the lines of any other modern-day private institution. "I can very well understand the importance of a public school in educating children coming from socially and economically poor backgrounds," he added. Sitting in swanky offices in the US, Hong Kong and Dubai, where his businesses are located, Goti frequently slips into nostalgia thinking about 'Kendravarti Shala' (earlier known as Taluka Shala), which helped him make a strong foundation for the future.
